A24 Film Features Sebastian Stan with Facial Deformity

Description

A24 has recently unveiled the trailer for Aaron Schimberg's latest film, "A Different Man," featuring Sebastian Stan in the lead role. The movie follows the story of Edward, played by Stan, who undergoes reconstructive surgery to alter his appearance due to a facial difference caused by a genetic condition. The actor's performance in the film earned him the best actor award at the Berlin Film Festival.

Edward's character is based on an aspiring actor with neurofibromatosis, portrayed with prosthetic makeup resembling his co-star Adam Pearson, who has the same condition. The plot takes an intriguing turn when Edward meets Oswald, played by Pearson, who bears an uncanny resemblance to Edward before his surgery.

The cast also includes Renate Reinsve, C. Mason Wells, and Owen Kline, among others. The film's premiere at the Sundance Film Festival saw Stan reflecting on his experience walking around New York City in prosthetic makeup, noting the candid reactions he received from children compared to adults.

Critics have praised Schimberg's bold approach in exploring themes of beauty, identity, and performance in "A Different Man," labeling it a dark comedy that challenges societal norms on attractiveness. The film is set to hit theaters on September 20, with the trailer available for viewing.

Overall, "A Different Man" promises a thought-provoking and introspective cinematic experience that delves into complex notions of physical appearance and self-perception.
