

Apple is presenting their May 7 keynote as an 'unique Apple Event'

Description

Apple is preparing for a special event on May 7 to unveil new iPads in a pre-recorded format. The company is teasing the event as a "different kind of Apple Event," sparking curiosity among fans. The event, named "Let Loose," is set for 7 a.m. PT, a departure from Apple's usual 10 a.m. PT start time.

Last year, Apple hosted an unconventional event in October, introducing new Macs in just 30 minutes, captured entirely on an iPhone. Could the upcoming event be edited on an iPad? The mystery adds excitement for fans eagerly awaiting the announcement.

Rumors suggest that new iPad Pro models with OLED displays and a powerful M4 chip will be unveiled, along with an upgraded iPad Air featuring the M2 chip and a larger 12.9-inch version. Expectations are high for new versions of accessories like the Magic Keyboard and Apple Pencil.

Apple enthusiasts can look forward to detailed coverage of the event next Tuesday on 9to5Mac. Stay tuned for more updates.
