

Baldur's Gate 3: Lands Top Sci-Fi/Fantasy Writing Award

Description

Baldur's Gate 3 recently won a Hugo Award for Best Game or Interactive Work. This award is given by the World Science Fiction Convention to recognize excellence in various categories. In 2024, the game beat out others like Alan Wake 2 and The Legend of Zelda to win the prize. The game's creator, Swen Vincke, was honored to receive the award and mentioned the hard work that went into creating the game. He also mentioned how the game is designed to react to player choices, with only a few players unlocking the rarest ending. Even though winning many awards has become overwhelming for the studio, they still value the recognition. Vincke feels grateful for the support from fans and the gaming community. Baldur's Gate 3 continues to impress with its storytelling and player-driven experience.
