

Ben Affleck's Stand Against Buying His Son $6,000 Sneakers

Description

Ben Affleck is a well-known Hollywood actor. He is a father of three kids. Recently, he took his 13-year-old son, Samuel, to a shoe event. There, his son liked a pair of shoes that cost $6,000.

Affleck told his son, "I won't pay for those shoes. They are too costly." He suggested Samuel to earn his own money if he really wants those shoes.

Affleck likes his kids to work for their own things. This is a good way to teach them the value of money. He wants his kids to earn their own money for the things they buy. When he was young, Affleck worked hard to chase his acting dream.

He is not the only dad who teaches his kids this way. Shaquille O'Neal, a famous basketball star, also told his kids to earn their own money. He said, "To use my money, you need to pass two degrees."

In the end, it is important that kids learn the value of money. One way is by earning it themselves. Affleck and O'Neal are good examples that teach this value to their kids.
