
Big swings on the course and the leaderboard as over 250 rising stars compete for the Daily Mail World Junior Golf Championship crown at stunning Villa Padierna course in Marbella

Description

The Costa Del Sol hills were teeming with anticipation as the next generation of golfers gathered for the start of some promising careers. Over 250 of golf's brightest young talent from across the world journeyed to compete for the title at the Daily Mail World Junior Golf Championship.

Competitors, some barely taller than their golf bags, faced the formidable yet stunning Villa Padierna golf course in Marbella. The tournament unfolded over three exciting days, full of highs, lows, and everything in between.

One name that shone brightly was Fraser Walters who dominated the 12-13 Boys competition, finishing a whopping eight strokes ahead of his competitors. The Scottish youngster had recently defeated Charlie Woods, son of golf legend Tiger Woods, in a tournament a few weeks prior.

But success didn't come without its challenges. Fraser battled severe allergies and even ended up in the hospital just days before the competition. Despite the adversity, Fraser played exceptionally well, proving his resilience on the course.

Another highlight of the event was 15-year-old Dane, Christian Photin who emerged victorious in a playoff against his close friend Noah Lundskaer. While the win was a milestone for Photin, he admitted it was disappointing to see his friend miss the winning shot.

Meanwhile, 15-year-old Maisie Whittall brought home a trophy after a nail-biting playoff round with her Italian counterpart, Matilde Modesti. Despite the tension, Maisie kept her cool and reaped the rewards of her resilience.

Among the sea of new talent was Benji Botham, grandson of cricket legend, Sir Ian Botham. Only seven years old and competing against older boys, Benji displayed fantastic skill, keeping the Botham family's proud sporting tradition alive.

As the event culminated, it provided a cherished backdrop for these young golfers. Each competitor will surely look back at these three days in Marbella as a stepping stone in what may blossom into successful golfing careers.
