

Caitríona Balfe Reflects on Outlander Farewell and Legacy

Description

The popular time-travel romantic drama Outlander will return for its eighth and final season on March 6th on STARZ. This season features main characters Jamie and Claire Fraser, played by Sam Heughan and Caitríona Balfe, as they return home to Fraser's Ridge. They must face both intruders and personal family secrets.

Caitríona Balfe recently spoke about her experience portraying Claire Fraser. She reflected on how the series has provided comfort to viewers over the years. "We were young when we started, and our journey has been incredible," she said. The strong support from fans has kept the show running for over a decade, but Balfe feels it is the right time to conclude their story.

Balfe hopes the legacy of Outlander will be one of love, justice, and inclusivity. She believes that the characters show a positive influence as immigrants seeking a better life and that their story can resonate with audiences today.

In the upcoming season, viewers can expect to see Claire grappling with her past. Balfe hinted at some shocking moments for her character, which may include painful memories resurfacing. Additionally, the story will explore the relationship with Claire and Jamie's granddaughter, Fanny, who brings a chance for healing within the family.

Outlander, Season Eight premieres on STARZ on March 6th, with new episodes released weekly every Friday.
