

Caitriona Balfe Reflects on Outlander's Final Day and Legacy

Description

The time-travel drama Outlander will return for its eighth and final season on March 6th on STARZ. In this season, Jamie (played by Sam Heughan) and Claire Fraser (Caitriona Balfe) return to Fraser's Ridge after being away for years. They must face outside intruders and uncover family secrets.

Caitriona Balfe, who plays Claire, shared her thoughts about finishing this iconic role. She described the journey as incredible, noting how important the fans have been in supporting the show for over a decade. Balfe acknowledged that ending the series feels strange and that after ten years, it was time to move on. She hopes fans will enjoy the final season and appreciate the entire series.

Balfe also discussed the themes of love and justice in the series. She believes Claire and Jamie showed kindness and inclusivity, which can resonate with audiences today. She reminded listeners of the importance of understanding history and engaging with social issues, to ensure fairness for everyone.

As for the new season, Balfe hinted at shocking scenes that will explore past traumas for Claire, involving her granddaughter Fanny. This storyline aims to bring healing to the family. The final season of Outlander promises to be emotional and significant.
