

Carolyn Hax: When is it okay for parents to talk to kids about grandma's affair?

Description

Dear Carolyn wrote to ask for advice about her mother-in-law. Carolyn's mother-in-law is seeing someone else while still being married to her father-in-law. Carolyn has two young children who see their grandmother often. When the grandmother is away, the kids ask where she is, and Carolyn says she is out of town. Carolyn does not want to lie to her children but also does not want to share too much information that they may not understand. The writer advises Carolyn to handle the situation with care and set boundaries with her kids. She also suggests not forcing oneself to start dating after leaving an abusive relationship and instead focus on building friendships and connections without rushing into romantic relationships.
