
Crypto Mogul Devours $6.2M Banana Art in Hong Kong

Description

HONG KONG -- A cryptocurrency mogul recently acquired a piece of conceptual art featuring a solitary banana affixed to a wall with duct tape, which he purchased for an astounding $6.2 million last week. On Friday, he indulged in the fruit during a press conference at The Peninsula Hong Kong, one of the city's most opulent hotels, situated in the bustling area of Tsim Sha Tsui.

Chinese-born Justin Sun peeled the banana from the wall and savored it while addressing an assembled audience.

"It is decidedly superior to typical bananas; quite delightful indeed," he remarked.

Entitled "Comedian," this provocative work by Italian artist Maurizio Cattelan made waves upon its debut at Art Basel Miami Beach in 2019, captivating festival-goers who pondered whether the whimsical display was a satire or a bold critique of the art market's increasingly opaque values. Infamously, an artist once removed the banana and consumed it.

The artwork garnered such unprecedented attention that it had to be withdrawn from public view. Nevertheless, three iterations sold for prices ranging from $120,000 to $150,000, as per the gallery overseeing the sales at that time.

Last week, Sun, the founder of the cryptocurrency platform TRON, secured the winning bid at Sotheby's auction in New York. More precisely, he acquired a certificate of authenticity, thus conferring upon him the right to recreate the artwork by duct-taping a banana to a wall and denoting it "Comedian."

At the time, Sun articulated in a statement that the piece "epitomizes a cultural phenomenon that amalgamates the realms of art, memes, and the cryptocurrency landscape."

"I shall personally consume the banana, thereby honoring its significance in both art history and contemporary culture," he declared.

The South China Morning Post subsequently reported that the banana he devoured on Friday was procured locally.

On a further note, Sun announced via X that he invested $30 million in World Liberty Financial, a cryptocurrency venture initiated by U.S. President-elect Donald Trump in September, aimed at securing a prominent foothold in the digital currency domain.

In his post, Sun affirmed that his platform, TRON, is "dedicated to revitalizing America and spearheading innovation." Following this financial commitment, he was appointed as an advisor to World Liberty Financial.

It is pertinent to mention that last year, Sun faced charges from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission for fraud and various violations of securities law. Responding to the allegations, he asserted that the complaint "lacks merit."
