

Daniel Ives Recommends Buying Palantir Stock During Market Downturn

Description

Palantir (NYSE:PLTR) reported strong growth in Q1, with record profits and revenues surpassing expectations. Despite this, the stock fell 15% as it did not meet heightened investor expectations. The company raised its guidance for FY2024 but fell short of Street estimates. Slowing international sales, particularly in Europe, also impacted investor confidence. Analyst Daniel Ives sees the stock dip as a buying opportunity, citing Palantir's AI capabilities and growing client base. Ives rates the stock as Outperform with a $35 price target, representing a 64% upside potential. However, other analysts have a more cautious outlook, with a Moderate Sell consensus rating. With 42% annual growth in customer count, Palantir aims to capitalize on the expanding AI market. For more investment ideas, check out TipRanks' Best Stocks to Buy tool.
