

Elliot Tuttle Partners with Fusion Entertainment for 'Blue Film' Project

Description

Fusion Entertainment has a new client. His name is Elliot Tuttle. He is a writer and director. He made his first film called "Blue Film." It was shown at the Edinburgh Film Festival and NewFest.

"Blue Film" is a queer thriller. It stars Reed Birney and Kieron Moore. The story is about a camboy named Aaron Eagle. One night, he meets a client, and they have a surprising connection.

Elliot Tuttle studied at Occidental College. He lives in Los Angeles. He made a podcast called "Lina's Song." This podcast had actors like Hari Nef and Dylan Gelula. "Blue Film" is his first movie as a director.

The film is too bold for many festivals, but it got good reviews. A critic from Variety liked the actors' performances and said the film is strong and meaningful.

The film was produced by Bijan Kazerooni and others. It is looking for a way to be shown to more people. Kersh from Fusion Entertainment believes Tuttle is a unique voice in filmmaking.
