

Exciting Bluey Movie Collaboration by Disney and BBC Studios

Description

Bluey, the popular animated series on Disney+, is making its way to the big screen in 2027. The movie will be a CG-animated film, continuing the adventures of Bluey, a lovable blue heeler dog, and her family. Written and directed by creator Joe Brumm, the film will feature the original voice cast and music by Joff Bush.

Since its debut, Bluey has become a hit on Disney+, with special episodes like 'The Sign' attracting over 10 million viewers worldwide. The series has also been a success for BBC Studios, generating revenue through merchandise and licensing.

Created in Australia, Bluey has captured the hearts of kids and families around the world with its themes of play, imagination, and emotional connections. Disney Entertainment co-chairmen Dana Walden and Alan Bergman expressed excitement about bringing Bluey to the big screen, praising the show for inspiring and delighting families everywhere.

Producer Joe Brumm shared his enthusiasm for expanding Bluey into a feature film, aiming to create an immersive experience for families to enjoy together. Disney and BBC Studios, along with Ludo Studio, will collaborate on the production, with experienced animator Amber Naismith leading the team.

The movie marks an exciting new chapter for Bluey, offering fans a chance to experience their favorite characters on the big screen.
