Ford's Shares Jump Nearly 20% Amid AI Stock Speculation

Description

Ford shares went up a lot in the last few days. This happened after news about their new energy storage business. The stock rose 6.7% on Thursday. It had already increased by 13% the day before. Earlier that week, the share price had fallen by over 2%.

Ford announced its new division called Ford Energy. This division will sell battery energy storage systems made in the U.S. These systems are for utilities, data centres, and large businesses. This news comes after Ford said it would work with a Chinese battery company on a big electric vehicle battery plant in Michigan.

Some analysts see Ford's new energy business as important for its future. Morgan Stanley believes it can help Ford make more money from electric vehicles. They think Ford could make agreements for energy storage in the coming months.

The news about Ford Energy and the stock rise caught many people's attention. Analysts said the company might benefit from the growing interest in data centres and new technologies in the market.
