

Google Boss: Users Upset by Gemini AI Photo Diversity Scandal

Description

Hello everyone,

I want to talk about some problems in our app, Gemini (it was earlier called Bard). Some answers from the app hurt our users or were not fair. This was wrong and we are sorry.

With a lot of hard work, our team is trying to make things better. We can see some good changes now. No computer program is perfect but we will keep trying to make our AI better and better. We will understand what went wrong and fix it well.

Our goal is to create useful and simple information for everyone. We want to give right and fair details in our products. That's why people like them. We want the same for our new AI products too.

We are planning some important steps. This includes changing the way we do things, better processes, stronger testing and smart technical advice.

As we fix the errors, we should also improve the products. We are making good changes in AI. One good example is our 1 million long-context window breakthrough. It was very well liked.

We have made great products that many people and businesses enjoy using. Because we have good expertise in technology and research, we are ready to work better with AI. We want to make helpful products that you can trust.
