

James Gunn Addresses Controversial Superman Scene Reactions

Description

Get the latest entertainment news from Newsweek.

James Gunn, who writes and directs "Superman," has talked about a recent video. This video is the first teaser for the film. Some people were upset about one part of the video. Gunn explained that this part did not have final effects and was removed from the movie.

In an interview with Entertainment Weekly, he shared how he learned to film David Corenswet as Superman. Gunn addressed the teaser and said it showed a part of his learning process.

Gunn stated, "The shot was not finished, and I did not really like it. It won't be in the movie."

Some fans are not happy about the new direction of DC films. Despite this, "Superman" is set to open in theaters on July 11, with tickets on sale now. The movie stars David Corenswet and Rachel Brosnahan.
