

Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck Spotted Together in LA Post-Thanksgiving

Description

This holiday season has seen an increase in interactions between Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck, suggesting a renewed sense of camaraderie.

The former couple, who amicably concluded their decade-long marriage in 2015, were photographed navigating the streets of Brentwood, California, on Saturday morning.

Garner was seen picking up bagels before making her way to Affleck's residence, arriving with the baked goods in hand. Subsequently, the two set out for a leisurely drive together.

On this occasion, Garner epitomized casual elegance in a snug grey sweater paired with light-wash denim jeans.

This outing follows a Thanksgiving celebration in which the co-parents reunited with their children—Violet, aged 18; Seraphina, age 15; and Samuel, aged 12. The family collectively volunteered with the Midnight Mission, serving meals to the less fortunate in Los Angeles.

A source previously indicated that Affleck felt "blessed" to be surrounded by Garner and their children over the holiday, particularly in light of his separation from Lopez.

"Despite their past, Ben finds a measure of comfort in Garner's presence," the insider remarked.

It is plausible that the "Batman" actor will join Garner and their children for the Christmas festivities, especially since Garner has extended an invitation amidst his ongoing divorce.

"Christmas is one of Jen's beloved holidays, and she desires for her family to gather together as frequently as possible during such occasions," remarked an insider.

According to the source, “Garner and Affleck typically divide their time with the children during the holidays, but Jen has offered to spend Christmas together if he wishes.” Their amicable co-parenting relationship appears to be thriving, particularly noted during their joint Thanksgiving celebration.
