

Johnny Wactor, a former actor on 'General Hospital', tragically killed in Los Angeles shooting

Description

Former "General Hospital" actor Johnny Wactor tragically lost his life in downtown Los Angeles while trying to stop thieves over the weekend, as reported by his agent and CNN affiliate KABC.

According to KABC, Wactor, who portrayed Brando Corbin on the soap opera, was shot on his way home from work early Saturday morning. His mother confirmed the devastating news to KABC, describing him as a remarkable person who not only excelled as an actor but also served as a moral compass for all who knew him.

His agent, David Shaul, praised Wactor's work ethic and determination, highlighting his dedication to his craft. Shaul expressed the profound impact Wactor had on those around him, stating that he would be deeply missed.

Scarlett Wactor, the actor's mother, recounted the events leading to her son's untimely death, explaining that he approached what he believed was someone working on a car, only to be met with gunfire from a suspect.

The shooting, which occurred around 3:25 a.m. PT on Saturday, involved three men attempting to steal a catalytic converter before fatally shooting Wactor and fleeing the scene.

While the LAPD has not officially confirmed Wactor as the victim, his IMDb profile indicates his recent work on "General Hospital" and other productions.

The entertainment industry mourns the loss of a talented actor, as fans and colleagues remember Johnny Wactor for his passion, dedication, and kindness. His untimely death serves as a tragic reminder of the dangers lurking in unexpected situations, leaving a void in the hearts of those who knew him.
