

Join Disability Belongs' 2025 Virtual Entertainment Lab Cohort!

Description

Disability Belongs is a nonprofit group. They work to change how people see and treat those with disabilities. They have a new program called the 2025 Entertainment Lab.

This year, 25 Fellows and one duo will join the lab. They include writers, directors, and producers. They will learn through presentations, discussions, and workshops from experts in the industry.

The 2025 group includes people from many places. They come from cities like Los Angeles, New York City, and Toronto. They have different roles. There are writers, directors, and producers.

Maddy Ullman, a past participant, said, "I felt alone in the industry. Joining this group changed my life. I met other disabled creatives. It made me stronger and more confident."

The Entertainment Lab started in 2019. It helps disabled people in the entertainment field. There will be more in-person events in 2025 for TV writing and unscripted content.
