

Judge Rules Pooh Shiesty to Stay in Custody Amid Legal Dispute

Description

A judge in Dallas ordered rapper Pooh Shiesty to stay in jail. This is because he is accused of kidnapping three people in Texas. Pooh Shiesty and eight other men are part of this case. They are accused of taking money from the three people at gunpoint. This means they used a gun to threaten them and take their money.

The conflict started over a contract issue. A contract is a written agreement between two parties. The three people worked for a record label owned by rapper Gucci Mane. The FBI is also involved in the investigation. The FBI is the U.S. government agency that works to investigate and stop crimes.

Pooh Shiesty will remain in jail until his next hearing. A hearing is a meeting in court where the judge makes decisions about the case. His legal team, the group of lawyers who advise him, is working on his defence. They want to show that he should not stay in jail.
