Justin Baldoni Updates Lawsuit Against Blake Lively Following New Evidence Uncovered

Description

Actor Justin Baldoni has made changes to his lawsuit against actress Blake Lively. He said Blake was working with The New York Times a few months before their article came out in December 2024.

According to new papers seen by TMZ, Justin thinks that Blake ruined his name. Justin's team say that some things in the article showed wrong actions by Blake, The New York Times, and others. Justin's team found this by looking at the HTML source code for the article.

Justin is seeking $400 million from Blake and her husband Ryan Reynolds. He is also asking The New York Times for $250 million. He says that they changed text messages to support Blake's claims.

Justin's lawyer Bryan Freedman said that they had more proof. He said that Blake and her team planned to ruin Justin's name with lies and fake accusations.

There is also a timeline of over 150 pages in the lawsuit. It shows Blake's alleged plan to damage Justin's reputation from January 1, 2019.

Blake tried to get Justin's lawsuit against her dismissed. But this did not happen. Now the case is ongoing. More coverage on this lawsuit will be given soon.
