

Karate Kid Villain's Son, Screen Legend's Offspring, Dies at 63

Description

Chad McQueen, known for his role as Dutch in the first two Karate Kid films and the son of iconic actor Steve McQueen, has passed away at the age of 63. His family confirmed the news on social media, but did not disclose the cause or date of his death.

McQueen's children, Jeanie, Chase, and Madison, shared a touching message on Instagram, highlighting his dedication as a father and his love for racing, which honored his father's legacy. McQueen's portrayal of Dutch in The Karate Kid movies made him a fan favorite, although he did not appear in the recent Cobra Kai TV series reunion episode.

Apart from his roles in the Karate Kid franchise, McQueen appeared in other films like Fever Pitch and New York Cop, while also working behind the scenes as a producer. He was involved in the development of the treasure-hunt film Yucatan, a project that stemmed from his father's legacy.

McQueen's legacy extends beyond acting, as he also produced documentaries about his father and appeared in films like A Life of Endless Summers: The Bruce Brown Story. His contributions to the entertainment industry will be remembered fondly by fans and colleagues alike.
