Katy Perry reveals that her mother was deceived by a fake AI picture at the Met Gala

Description

AI-generated images of Katy Perry and Rihanna at the Met Gala have been making waves on social media, despite neither singer actually attending the event. Katy Perry herself shared fake images of her on Instagram, revealing that even her mother was fooled by the realistic-looking photos. One image of Perry in a floral gown garnered over 13 million views. Fans admitted to being tricked by the AI-generated images, with one saying, "I really reposted this believing it was true."

The AI-generated content trend highlights how technology is becoming increasingly sophisticated, even fooling celebrities and their loved ones. The potential for misinformation and its consequent impact is concerning, as seen with a faked AI-generated audio clip that caused unrest offline. Social media users are urged to be vigilant and fact-check information in the face of such technological advancements.

Additionally, an AI-generated image of Rihanna also went viral, showing her in an elaborate gown even though she did not attend the Met Gala due to illness. Other celebrities like Dua Lipa experienced fake photos circulating before revealing their actual red carpet looks.

The Met Gala, known for hosting A-list celebrities and iconic fashion moments, raises funds for the Metropolitan Museum of Art through its high-profile event. The allure of the Gala attracts stars like Zendaya, Jennifer Lopez, and Chris Hemsworth, with tickets rumored to cost upwards of $70,000.
