

Kratos Actor Reveals PS5 God of War Plans for Late Summer

Description

Kratos' voice actor, Christopher Judge, has shared details about the next God of War game. He mentioned in a video that fans will hear more about it in late summer. This news fits with recent rumours that the new game from Santa Monica Studio will be released in 2027.

In the same video, Judge said TC Carson will return to voice Kratos in the God of War Trilogy Remake, so Judge will not be part of that project. He also noted that the Remake will include new technology and a different fighting system.

Judge hinted that Santa Monica Studio's next game might feel like a new title, suggesting it could explore a new mythology, possibly in Ancient Egypt.

Rumours have suggested the game could be announced later this year and released in 2027. It is anticipated that there might be an announcement during a State of Play event in the summer, but Judge's "late summer" comment indicates that it could be later than that.

Fans seem eager to learn more about this project, and they may not have to wait much longer for further updates.
