

Matt Booty Outlines Future Plans for Xbox Exclusive Games

Description

Today, Xbox announced two new console exclusive games. This was at the Xbox Games Showcase in 2026. Matt Booty is the Chief Content Officer at Xbox. He spoke in an interview after the event.

Booty said exclusives are very important for Xbox. He wants to give fans a reason to buy an Xbox. However, he said each game will be decided on its own. Big multiplayer games will still be available on all platforms. But the single-player games may be different.

Booty mentioned two upcoming games. These are Gears of War: E-Day in 2026 and Clockwork Revolution in 2027. He promised that Xbox will keep its word about past game releases. Some games like Halo: Campaign Evolved and Fable will still come to PS5.

More exclusive games are expected in the future. But big multiplayer games will be shared with other platforms. Fans are eager to see what Xbox will decide next.
