

McDonald's Manager in ICU After Hot Oil Accident

Description

A McDonald's manager in Yuba City has been admitted to intensive care after a colleague allegedly threw hot oil on him. The incident occurred after their shift on 30 May. The injured man, Jacob Smith, 20, suffered third-degree burns to his face, neck, hands, and shoulders and is now receiving specialised treatment at UC Davis Medical Center.

Jacob's co-worker, 23-year-old Jalani Bluett, is accused of launching the attack. Following the incident, Bluett was reported missing but was later found and arrested by the authorities.

Jacob's mother, Amber Smith, shared that her son is engaged and working hard to build a life for himself. Despite facing a long road to recovery and enduring considerable pain, she noted his remarkable positivity throughout this difficult time. "My son has an amazing spirit," she commented, describing him as a good person.

The local community has rallied around the family, offering much support as Jacob heals. To assist with medical expenses, they have created a GoFundMe campaign. Amber expressed her heartbreak over the incident, wishing to alleviate her son's financial worries so he can focus solely on his recovery.

Jacob is set to undergo further surgeries next week, including a skin graft procedure. Meanwhile, Bluett has been booked into the Sutter County Jail and is facing charges of battery resulting in serious bodily injury.
