

Mustang TLD Resembles GT But Lacks Its Sound

Description

Ford has launched the Mustang EcoBoost TLD Signature Edition, a limited package designed in collaboration with Troy Lee Designs. This model, which features significant aesthetic enhancements, is crucial as it caters to enthusiasts seeking a unique appearance while offering a version of the Mustang EcoBoost.

Only 550 units will be produced, with each package priced at $3,000. The design includes vibrant graphics in shades of red, orange, purple, and yellow, accentuating the vehicle's sides. Available solely in Shadow Black, this edition also integrates elements from the Mustang GT, such as a more aggressive grille, front fascia, and hood. These modifications aim to enhance the sporty look and somewhat obscure the fact that it houses a four-cylinder engine rather than a more powerful alternative.

The vehicle features a distinctive Sinister Bronze logo and matching components, including 19-inch wheels that enhance its visual appeal. Additionally, it is adorned with a graphic on the hood, adding to its bespoke character. Inside, the car includes Black and Carmine Red leather seats, accented with red stitching, and showcases a serialized badge on the dashboard that reflects the exterior design.

Orders for the Mustang TLD Signature Edition will begin on March 27. In tandem, Ford plans to offer the Mustang RTR package, which boasts an Avalanche Gray exterior and performance features taken from the GT. Furthermore, the highly anticipated Mustang Dark Horse SC will have its orders open later in April, beginning at $103,490, and will feature a supercharged 5.2-liter V8 engine delivering over 700 horsepower.
