Niall Horan (right) expressed his deep sorrow over the loss of his close friend Liam Payne.

Niall Horan, former bandmate of Liam Payne from One Direction, expressed profound grief over the loss of his cherished friend.

Horan, who was on tour in Buenos Aires where Payne passed away, shared his disbelief, reminiscing about their recent meeting and the permanence of the goodbye he bid.

In a heartfelt Instagram post, Horan praised Payne's infectious zest for life and his ability to bring joy to those around him.

Reflecting on their shared experiences and dreams realized, Horan emphasized the rare and profound friendship they shared.

Sending love and condolences to Payne's family, Horan concluded with a poignant tribute: "Thank you for everything, Payno."

Horan's statement follows a heartfelt response from other One Direction members, each mourning the loss of a dear friend and talented musician.

The band, formed in 2010, expressed the need for time to process their grief in a joint statement issued following Payne's untimely passing.

The entertainment industry, including artists like Ed Sheeran and Robbie Williams, also mourned the loss of the talented musician.

Sheeran and Williams emphasized the importance of kindness and compassion, urging fans to be understanding of the struggles individuals may face behind the spotlight.

As the world grapples with this tragic loss, the messages of love and remembrance for Liam Payne continue to echo across the music industry and beyond.
