

Paul Simon Returns to Tour After Hearing Loss

Description

After an absence of nearly a decade from the concert scene, the venerable Paul Simon is poised to grace audiences once more with a series of exclusive performances.

Now at the age of 83, Simon has announced a captivating tour, aptly titled "A Quiet Celebration Tour," that will unfold in the spring and summer of 2025. This endeavor promises an intimate concert experience.

"The evolution of this extraordinary artist continues to unfold," the press release articulates, noting Simon's decision to perform in smaller venues that boast optimal acoustics, particularly in light of the profound hearing loss he has endured in recent years.

PAUL SIMON REVEALS HEARING LOSS, CONTEMPLATES MORTALITY: 'MY GENERATION'S TIME IS UP'

In May 2023, Simon disclosed that he had lost most of the hearing in his left ear; however, the "Sound of Silence" collaborator expressed a renewed inspiration to take the stage.

"Simon chose to perform in intimate venues where the acoustics are optimal given the severe hearing loss he has encountered over the last few years."

As he prepares for this intimate repertoire, Simon has been diligently rehearsing, conceptualizing how to present 'Seven Psalms' alongside nuanced arrangements of his timeless classics.

"A Quiet Celebration Tour" will debut in New Orleans on April 4th, traversing various locations across North America, concluding in Seattle in August.

This upcoming tour signifies Simon's return following his recognition of deteriorating hearing during the creation of his most recent work, "Seven Psalms."

Despite an unexpected hearing loss to his left ear, which felt insurmountable, Simon remains determined to reignite his passion for performance.
