

Today's Up-to-the-Minute Stock Market Updates

Description

European stocks started the day on a positive note as markets opened higher on Tuesday. The pan-European Stoxx 600 index rose by 0.68% in early trading, with all sectors and major bourses showing gains. The U.K.'s FTSE index was up 0.56% at 8,187, Germany's DAX up 0.67% at 18,188, France's CAC 40 up 0.65% at 7,620, and Italy's FTSE MIB up 1.07% at 33,253.

Meanwhile, companies are gearing up for tougher questions on artificial intelligence (AI) as the next earnings season approaches. Dan Niles of Niles Investment Management predicts a critical moment in the market soon, with investors becoming more discerning about the returns on AI investments. This scrutiny could lead to a broader market rally as businesses are evaluated for their long-term potential in the tech sector.

In other news, the Nasdaq Composite has outperformed other major indices since its low in October, soaring by 41.77%. Companies like Chegg and Lennar also made headlines with their performance post-earnings. Chegg shares jumped 22% after announcing job cuts, while La-Z-Boy saw a more than 10% increase following positive earnings reports.

Overall, the market remains steady with stock futures showing minimal changes in early evening trading.
