

Trump White House's Nihilistic View of War

Description

Yesterday, the White House shared a new video on social media. This video promotes the war in Iran. It looks like a video game called Wii. The clip shows the words "Operation Epic Fury" against a light blue background.

The video mixes fun Wii graphics with real war footage. While cheerful music plays, it shows cartoon characters bowling and hitting baseballs. Suddenly, it cuts to bombs hitting targets in Iran. The images are very different from the game.

The video only shows American missiles hitting military sites. Many people are suffering from this war. Recently, an American missile hit a school, killing at least 170 people, mostly children. Footage also shows fires in oil fields, causing toxic smoke.

Critics say this video is like propaganda, which means it aims to influence people's opinions. Many believe this style is wrong and misleading. The war is very unpopular. People are concerned about the possible long-term effects of this conflict.
