

Unveiling Rumors: Pokémon's Second Mainline Game 2025

Description

Following a dry spell in 2024, Pokemon enthusiasts are anticipating an exciting 2025, spurred on by a fresh rumor. While Pokemon Legends: Z-A is confirmed for release in 2025, a purported leak from the reputable informant Riddler Khu hints at the possibility of a second mainline Pokemon game launching that same year. Although skepticism is warranted, there is a wealth of evidence that may lend credibility to this assertion.

Game Freak and The Pokemon Company have indeed verified that Pokemon Legends: Z-A is classified as a mainline entry.

While it might seem unusual for the Pokemon franchise to deliver two significant titles in one calendar year, recent history suggests otherwise. The absence of a mainline release in 2024, coupled with the anticipated launch of Nintendo's next-generation Switch in 2025, may prompt Pokemon to maximize its offerings for fans. Additionally, past instances have seen mainline games like Pokemon Brilliant Diamond and Shining Pearl release shortly before Pokemon Legends: Arceus.

A recent post on X/Twitter from CentroLeaks indicates that Riddler Khu has been teasing this new mainline game for 2025, which is distinct from the upcoming Gen 10 titles. Although Khu has a mixed track record, if this new game comes to fruition, it could redeem earlier mispredictions regarding Pokemon Black and White remakes. Speculation suggests that this second release might either be a new Pokemon Let's Go installment centered in Johto or potentially those much-anticipated Gen 5 remakes.
