

WWE Confirms Paul Heyman Suffered Serious Injury on Raw

Description

Seth Rollins returned to WWE during the Elimination Chamber event. He aimed to take revenge on the group that betrayed him. What surprised fans was his focus on Paul Heyman, his former manager.

At Elimination Chamber, Rollins attacked Logan Paul. With Rollins' help, Cody Rhodes eliminated Paul from the match. However, Rollins wanted more revenge, so he had further plans for Monday Night Raw.

On March 2, during Raw, Rollins and his group of masked men distracted Logan Paul and Austin Theory. While they were distracted, Rollins confronted Heyman in the ring. He then hit Heyman with a chair and delivered a powerful stomp. Medical staff quickly rushed to help Heyman, who left the ring injured and bleeding.

Later, Michael Cole updated fans about Heyman's injuries. He mentioned that Heyman had cuts on his face, a spine injury, and a damaged nose. Because of these injuries, Heyman will not appear on WWE TV for a long time.

This absence comes at a critical time as the WrestleMania event approaches. The group Heyman was part of now looks weak, with only Logan Paul and Austin Theory remaining active members. Rollins, on the other hand, is set to compete again soon.
